YES-These thesis statements follow the correct structure of Condition Phrase, Claim, and Support.	No-These thesis statements do not follow the correct structure of Condition Phrase, Claim, and Support.
In John F. Kennedy's Inaugural Address,he establishes a hopeful tone for his presidency through complex syntax, effective logos, and powerful pathos. In Patrick Henry's "Speech to the Virginia Convention," he clarifies his reasons for supporting war against Britain using vivid diction, compelling logos, and effective pathos. Although many argue that cheerleading is not a sport, it is because it requires athletic ability, stamina, and discipline. In Hemingway's "Soldier's Home," he depicts a damaged soul through his use of repetition, dialogue, and setting. Although some argue that President Trump is doing a good job, he is not because he has lost his credibility with the American public, his tweets jeopardize national security, and he is unable to work with congress in a bipartisan manner.	Pizza is a great food for birthday parties, sleepovers, and dances. Coral, seaweed, and seashells are often taken from the ocean which is wrong. I like Sally because she wears pink most days. The government should not be allowed to control our Internet access.